Labour's asylum policy will change the face of Britain for ever

AND THEY DIDN'T EVEN ASK IF THEY COULD!

FIVE GIANT NEW cities, each the size of Birmingham, will be needed over the next thirty years to house new immigrants arriving here to settle in Britain. That's according to the latest official Government projections.

Over this period, 5.2 million settlers will make up two-thirds of an increase of 7.8 million in our country's population. Given that the native British birth rate is not even enough to keep our numbers constant over that period, the rest of the rise in population will be due to the descendants of earlier waves of immigrants who arrived in Britain during the 1950s, '60s and '70s.

The figures were published for the second time on January 29th as Variant Population Projections issued by the Government's Actuary Department.

Initial estimates assumed net UK immigration at 103,000 per year, but this figure has now been revised upward to 158,000 immigrants every year.

These figures are based solely on official records of legal immigrants arriving on our shores. They take no account of illegal immigration, which will make the real figures considerably higher.

Three-quarters of this immigrant population growth will be in South East England, already one of the most densely populated areas of its size on Earth.

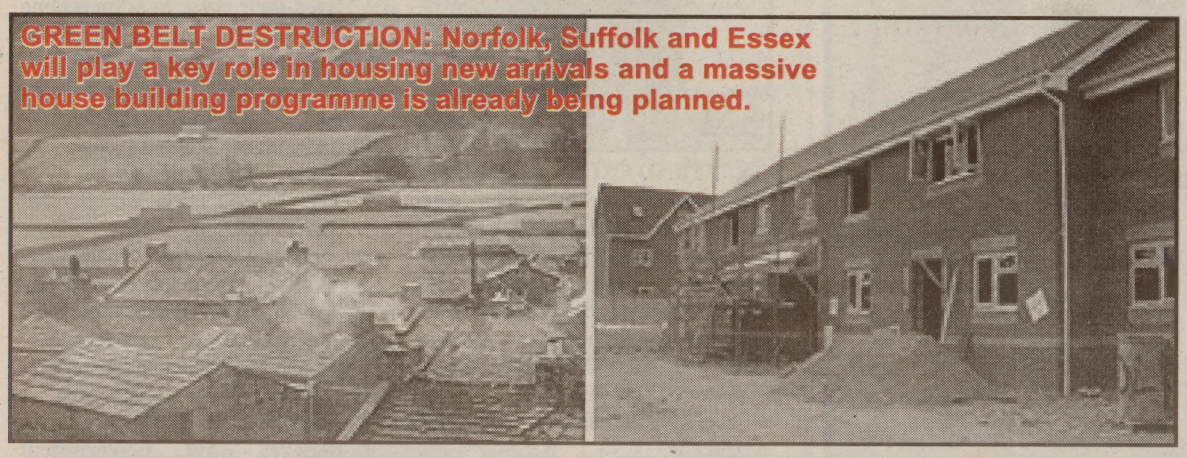
"We face the highest levels of immigration in our history"
Sir Andrew Green, Migration Watch

Responding to these frightening new official figures, Sir Andrew Green, Chairman of the pressure group Migration Watch, raised concerns which will be shared by many Britons who see our homeland being thus overrun:

"It is only every two years that government figures provide the opportunity to explore the impact of immigration on our population, yet these figures have emerged on the day after the Hutton Report and with no Press announcement

"They make it abundantly clear that we face the highest levels of immigration in our history.

"The whole nature of our society is being irreversibly changed without the British people even being consulted."



GREEN BELT DESTRUCTION: Norfolk, Suffolk and Essex will play a key role in housing new arrivals and a massive house building programme is already being planned.

BNP gain another seat on Stoke Council

THE BRITISH National Party gained a new councillor in Stoke when Barry Cuthbertson took the bold and brave decision to leave the Independent group on the council and join the BNP.

Barry, who has represented the Norton and Bradeley Ward for the last four years, will join Councillor Steve Batkin, who represents Longton North ward, to form a BNP Group on the council.

West Midlands Regional Organiser Simon Darby, told Freedom:

"Barry Cuthbertson is well liked and highly respected by his ward constituents and brings years of experience to

Oldham Council dig up Gavin's plaque and even throw away the flowers!

A MEMORIAL stone for Gavin Hopley laid by the British National Party in the spot where he was murdered in a race attack, was dug up by Oldham Council and the flowers planted with it were pulled up and thrown away.

The 19-year-old, from Whitworth, was left in a coma after he was beaten and kicked by a gang of Bengali men and died six days later in hospital.

Colin Burrows, from Oldham BNP, told Freedom:

"We contacted Gavin's grandmother and she was happy for us to lay the plaque.

"The memorial is just our gesture for Gavin Hopley. We also planted a tribute of two roses, daffodils and primroses.

"The suggestion of a plaque was made at the local BNP meeting and all the people there put money in a collection for it."

Oldham Council instructed workmen to remove it immediately from the junction of Waterloo Street and Hardy Street, announcing: "This is not authorised street furniture or signage, and does not have planning permission, it is illegal."

Meanwhile, Greater Manchester Police admit that Gavin's killers will not face justice for the crime. "Five people have been convicted of violent disorder or theft, a sixth has been found not guilty of murder. We believe we have got the people involved," a spokesman told the Oldham Chronicle.

RED ROSE OR WHITE FLAG

Labour supporting Muslim Communities

Councillor Ebrahim Adia, Labour candidate for the European Parliament, discusses policy with members of the Muslim community.

Find out what Labour has done for your community and about the NEW protection at work against discrimination.

Labour plays the religious card! But it won't benefit Christian voters

TONY BLAIR and the Labour Party have launched a secret campaign to win over Britain's Muslim block in time for the European Elections in June.

Over two million A4 full colour glossy leaflets entitled 'Labour Supporting Muslim Communities', have been delivered to mosques and Islamic centres throughout Britain.

It's a desperate attempt to win back the Muslim vote from the Liberal-Democrats after the Brent by-election, where Labour lost the Islamic block vote because of the war in Iraq.

The campaign has been hidden from the public by dressing it up as an initiative from the Shopworkers' Union USDAW. But Tony Blair has a sack full of promises on the table in return for Muslim support for Labour candidates in June.

Top offer is relaxed employment regulations to accommodate the religious needs of Muslims in the workplace. State-funded Islamic schools are next, followed by the 'reform' of stamp duty to allow Islamic mortgages.

In the workplace Labour's trump card is the 'extended leave agreement' whereby Muslim staff will have the right to take several weeks off work, not just for religious reasons such as pilgrimages, but for family reasons as well such as weddings or other important family occasions.

Six-term school year with Eid raised to the status of Easter!

They also promise to insist that employers cater for the needs of Muslims in the workplace:

- Providing for different dietary requirements in the workplace canteen,
- Accommodating cultural or religious holidays either as annual or unpaid leave.
- Offering flexible working to attend a local mosque for prayers.
- Providing on-site washing facilities and a quiet area for prayer.
- Offering rest times to coincide with prayer times.
- Offering flexible working during Ramadan especially to accommodate Iftar.
- Treating sympathetically requests for annual leave to perform the pilgrimage to Mecca.
- Accommodating refusals to work in the alcohol, tobacco or meat section of a store that are due to religious belief.
- Developing a dress code that accommodates religious dress such as headscarves and accommodates the need to dress modestly.

But probably the most potent offer that Labour has up its sleeve is the six-term school year with fixed holiday points.

This would raise the status of Eid to that of Easter.

This new academic year would include a two week break in October to allow Muslim children to accompany parents back to Pakistan to take advantage of the particularly agreeable climate at this time of year.

But even this offer might not be enough to satisfy disgruntled Muslim voters.

A Labour insider told Freedom:

"Unfortunately, no system of fixed holidays can cope with the Islamic calendar which is based on twelve lunar months and is shorter than the western calendar. The only way to fully meet Muslim requirements would be to actually change Britain to the Islamic calender, but I don't think even Tony's quite ready for that one yet."

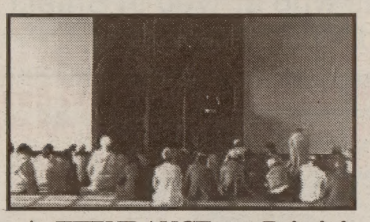
The rise of Islam



ATTENDANCE at Britain's mosques has outstripped the number of regular worshippers in the Church of England for the first time.

Figures for January compiled from government and academic sources show that 930,000 Muslims attend a place of worship at least once a week, as against 916,000 Anglicans.

Muslim leaders said that it was a landmark in the rise of Islam in Britain and that Muslims must receive a share of the Church of England's privileged status.

Tory fraud exposed

TORY MEP Bashir Khanbhai claimed after the Yoxford by-election that the BNP had no place in Norfolk and Suffolk. But now the BNP can reveal that it's actually Bashir who has no place in Norfolk or Suffolk.

His claim to live at 57, Peninsula Cottage, Staitheway Road, Wroxham, Norfolk is just a fraud to con voters into thinking he lives in Norfolk. There is no such address.

Another home address given by the MEP in Suffolk is also phoney, as it is the constituency office of South Suffolk MP Tim Yeo.

British jobs go to Slovakia

IN APRIL, Korean firm Samsung will up sticks and swan off to Slovakia, closing its Wynyard plant in Stockton and leaving the 450 workforce without jobs. Another 500 workers will be laid off from the plant's local supply factories, dealing another devastating blow to the Teesside town.

In 1993 Samsung was tempted to Britain by a £58 million handout from the then Tory Government. They promised to create 'an electronic city' bringing prosperity to the area and providing jobs for the local workforce.

STOCKTON JOBS: Samsung is transferring them to Slovakia.

Within two years this was exposed as a sham as wages at the factory were so low that staff were eligible for state top-up benefits.

Even their claim to be providing jobs for the local workforce was proved to be phoney, with one of their main suppliers being a Chinese-owned company now under investigation for employing illegal Chinese immigrants.

The Government's excuse that Samsung is a victim of the economic recession, is just another Labour lie. The company posted record profits for 2003 and announced a new range of products to be launched from their factories back home in Korea!

The British National Party believes that Government economic aid should only go to British companies who give an undertaking never to relocate overseas and only to employ British workers.

Thoughts on Immigration

The British people were never given the chance to vote on whether they wanted Britain to become a 'multicultural' society.

*The British National Party is opposed to 'multiculturalism' because it fragments society and generates conflict.

The British National Party seeks to protect and preserve the ethnic and cultural integrity of the British people.

*Labour and Conservative Governments, for the past fifty-five years, have allowed large scale immigration into Britain from the Third World against the clear wishes of the British people.

Now leading population experts predict that the native British people will be a minority in our own country within 60 years.

*The British National Party will end immigration and the settlement of asylum seekers in Britain.

The British National Party will encourage immigrants to return to their country of ethnic origin by providing generous financial incentives to help those who want to return home.

EU tells Brits to cough up more!

THE EUROPEAN Commission is demanding that Britain hands over more of its gross national income to the EU budget so that extra cash can be poured into the ten poor countries which join the EU on May 1st.

This will mean an increase of £25 on top of the current £130 charge per year for every British taxpayer - £3 a week each - that will flow out of Britain to be invested in housing, education, health and welfare services in Eastern European countries while our home services crumble.

All the while 1.5 million non-EU nationals settle in the EU every year, adding to the 50 million already here.

In February the European Parliament asked member countries for another 900 million euros to provide for the needs of 8 million Roma and Sinti gypsies from Romania and Hungary who join the EU in 2007.

White flight won't work

BRITONS who move out of the inner-city areas in search of a lifestyle more inkeeping with their culture are finding that 'white flight' doesn't work anymore.

According to an analysis of the 2001 Census figures conducted by Experian, the credit checking and business services company, the multi-racial society is likely to follow you wherever you go.

They found that in the last ten years over 700,000 Asians alone have moved out of the inner cities to "upmarket suburban" areas.

the BNP Group."

At a Press Conference in Stoke, Cllr. Cuthbertson told reporters that "the people of Stoke had been brought to their knees by years of political mismanagement at a national and local level."

He went on to say "my father fought at Dunkirk, supposedly for freedom but if he could see what was being done in Britain to curtail freedom of speech, he would turn in his grave".

The British National Party welcomes Barry Cuthbertson to our ranks and will of course give him our fullest assistance in his work for the people of Stoke.

'Tabloids and racism to blame for blacks in prison' (Apparently committing crime doesn't have anything to with it)

AFRO-CARRIBEAN men are nine times more likely to commit a crime that warrants a prison sentence as punishment than a British man, that's according to the lastest Government statistics.

New Home Office figures show numbers of African-Caribbean prisoners has leapt a staggering 58% since 1997, with young black men under the age of 25 making up over 90% of all black inmates.

The last six years has seen the steepest ever climb in the numbers and proportion of black prisoners. Today there are now three times as many African-Caribbeans behind bars than there were in 1985 when Douglas Hurd was Home Secretary.

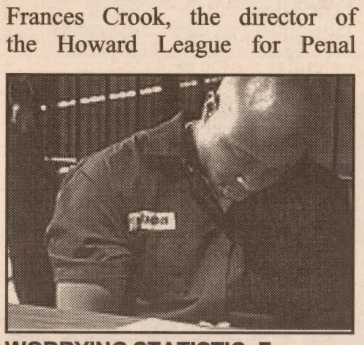
African-Caribbean's made up 8% of the total prison population back then, but that figure is now 17%.

The CRE recently published a report, called 'Race Equality in Prisons', and found that for every 100,000 white people in Britain, 188 were in jail. But for black people the figure was 1,704. That means black people are over nine times more likely to be in prison than their white counterparts.

An even more worrying statistic is that for every African Caribbean student at university there are now two in prison.

Ordinary Britons understandably presume from these figures that black people are committing more crime and that is why they are being detained. But in Britain today there is no place for such common-sense conclusions.

Frances Crook, the director of the Howard League for Penal Reform, says it's nothing to do with committing crime:



WORRYING STATISTIC: For every black student at university there are two black inmates in prison.

"Ordinary Britons understandably presume from these figures that black people are committing more crime and that is why they are being detained. But in Britain today there is no place for such commonsense conclusions."

"It reflects racism in the general population, but also increasing concerns of racism being directed at particular groups of people."

"The hate campaigns [against asylum seekers] of the tabloids has a knock-on effect in terms of sentencing of black people!"

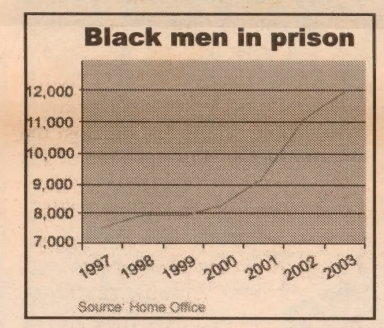
Juliet Lyon, director of the Prison Reform Trust, said the government needed to take racism in the criminal justice system seriously.

"Not only have [overall prison] numbers risen, but the numbers of Afro-Caribbeans have increased at an alarming proportion."

"At every level of the criminal justice system black people are over-represented."

The Commission for Racial Equality (CRE) called on the government reverse the trends, and campaigners urged ministers to tackle racism in the criminal justice system.

No doubt Tony Blair and his Labour Government will be looking at a quota system for our prisons where like in employment, positive discrimination is used to bring ethnic minority representation in line with their population in the country as a whole.



In the case of criminals serving prison sentences, this would mean that huge numbers of black inmates would have to be released so they are not over-represented.

Those in power believe that this epidemic of black crime over the last five years is the fault of racist Britons and our tabloid newspapers!

The British National Party believes it is because young blacks living in Britain today are alienated from British society. The migration of their parents and grandparents to Britain has denied them their own roots, their own culture and a country that they can truly call their own.

Indian call centres providing rich pickings for credit card fraud

BRITISH job losses are not the only result of the cost-cutting business trend to relocate call centres to India and Pakistan. The move is directly linked to a dramatic increase in the level of credit card fraud and security breaches.

The National Outsourcing Association admitted last month that moving the processing of sensitive financial information out to Asia has proved "a Godsend to organised crime".

The potential for bribery in such a low-wage area as India has given organised crime unprecedented access to previously secure information. A skilled engineer making around £4,000 annually is an easy target for organised crime which can afford to pay a lifetime's wages for data.

Big business continues to assure the British people that giving our livelihoods to foreign workers is actually for our benefit because it reduces service costs.

We all know that, in reality, the savings companies make by paying a pittance to overseas workers provide higher dividends for fat-cat executives and faceless shareholders.

We also know that even though it's the loss of British jobs that has secured these higher dividends, the costs of increased security breaches will undoubtedly be passed on to the British people!

Union boss tells his members how to vote!

UNISON General Secretary Dave Prentis, doesn't care how much of his members' money he spends when he's attacking the BNP.

He has announced that he is going to use union funds, intended for looking after the welfare of his members and improving their working conditions, to send out 1.3 million personal letters telling people not to vote for the British National Party in June's local and European Elections.

PRENTIS: Spend, spend, spend! Dave loves squandering those union dues.

Prentis refused to divulge whether this missive would be going out by 1st or 2nd class post or whether he would be declaring his interference in our democratic process to the Electoral Commission.

Secret meeting proves the old parties are all the same

BURNLEY: Michael Howard leaves the East Lancashire town after making the speech which had first received Labour and the Lib-Dem approval.

THE MANAGER of the plush hotel just off the M62 in West Yorkshire was in a real panic on the morning of the last Saturday in January when he saw a queue of Labour, Tory and Liberal Democrat MPs at reception, all asking where their meeting was!

He no doubt thought that there had been a monumental triple booking fiasco as he only had one meeting booked for that day which was for the pro-Labour Party Joseph Rowntree Trust.

But, of course, there was no need to panic. The MPs from Britain's three main parties were happily meeting together to work out an election strategy to defeat the British National Party in the European and local elections in June.

The three parties, who pretend in public to be so critical of each other, agreed that the key to beating the BNP was to improve the Conservative vote in those areas where the BNP was making an impact.

The meeting decided that the Tories would be allowed to play the anti-immigration card in these areas and this wouldn't be criticised by Labour and the Lib-Dems.

This secret meeting proves what the British National Party says at every election it contests. The three old parties are exactly the same - only a vote for the BNP will make a difference.

Judge lets gun-totting bus driver walk free!

WHEN sentencing bus driver Amanulla Turk to 140 hours community service, Leicester Crown Court Judge Michael Stokes said, "Normally anyone who carries a weapon of this sort on the streets of Leicester would be sent to prison."

Turk had produced a loaded pistol from his jacket whilst driving an Arriva bus full of passengers, following a minor altercation with another motorist. The judge accepted that Turk had suffered racist abuse as a bus driver and had bought the gun to protect himself.

BNP priorities are victim support & public protection

by Tina Wingfield

BRITAIN'S STREETS are more dangerous than ever before, with Home Office statistics revealing that violent crime increased by 14 per cent over the last 12 months.

The rises for the most serious offences, including murder, were even more dramatic, up by a staggering 18 per cent.

Reflecting this increase in crime, the prison population currently stands at 71,149 - just 1,300 below its maximum capacity.

Of those released from prison 55% will re-offend within two years and up to 80% with young offenders. With the 'revolving door' of prison producing an average new intake of 400 a week, the Prison Service is close to breaking point.

Contrary to liberal thinking, the relentless rise in the prison population is not simply the consequence of over-zealous judges and magistrates imposing short sentences for trivial offences. Less than a fifth of sentenced prisoners in the system are serving terms of a year or less. A more dramatic rise has been seen in the number of higher sentences for more serious offending, with the number of inmates serving sentences of more than three years rising from 16,154 in 1990 to 28,090 by 2000.

But something far more fundamental than a tougher climate within the courts is filling our prisons to capacity. The real change is in the criminal population itself and it is DRUG MISUSE that is fuelling an epidemic of violence and disorder.

According to the head of the Prison Service, up to 80 per cent of new prisoners in urban jails are hard drug users. The number of prisoners requiring immediate detox treatment has risen steadily from around 16,000 in 1996 to a massive 47,000 in 2002.

Labour's supposedly 'tough on crime, tough on the causes of crime' response was to announce a review of the system of classifying illegal drugs. Following on from the recent decriminalisation of cannabis, the government's Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs will consider further relaxation of current drugs laws.

Such an initiative will do nothing to solve the problem of drugs-related crime and disorder. There needs to be a fundamental shift in thinking within the criminal justice system if this social disease is to be tackled effectively.

The current Government fixation with the 'rights' of criminals must be replaced with an approach to criminal justice that is unapologetically biased towards the victim and public protection. Practical, tough measures - proven to be effective in reducing drugs-related crime - will be introduced by a British Nationalist government.

It is possible to win the battle against drugs and crime - but first war must be declared and the will to triumph made evident!

HOW TO WIN THE WAR AGAINST DRUGS & CRIME

- ...Massive expansion of Britain's Customs units to crack the international drugs supply chain.
- ...Linking of drugs policy and foreign affairs - no aid for regimes associated with the drugs trade.
- ...Mandatory life prison sentences for those convicted of large-scale supply.
- ...Immediate deportation orders for Third World drugs mules.
- ...Increased funding for the prison service (for staff and structure, including drug treatment units).
- ...Prison sentences to fit the crime; no automatic remission.
- ...Re-classification of cannabis to a serious and dangerous drug.
- ...Investment in community drug treatment services; priority given to non-offenders.
- ...Drugs education programmes within schools, re-emphasising the dangers associated with drug misuse, including cannabis.

Will prison soon be the safest place to live?

THE Home Secretary, David Blunkett, has announced a series of measures aimed at drastically reducing Britain's prison population and the spiralling criminal justice budget.

The new European-style 'light-touch' options will include part-time imprisonment, semi-secure urban hostels and a vast extension of tagging. In the future employed offenders despite being convicted of crimes 'so serious as to warrant a custodial sentence', need only report to their cells over the weekend.

In circumstances where even part-time prison is considered a trifle too harsh, judges will have the option of offering a semi-secure 'hostel' place, situated within local communities so as to facilitate offender integration.

For the remainder of those criminals convicted of offences sufficiently serious enough to merit imprisonment, the best that the Government's new 'prison' budget can buy is an electronic tag accessory which comes with an inconvenient night-time curfew.

There is uncertainty however, over whether these new 'light-touch' options will, in fact, reduce prison numbers.

Given the increased levels of convicted serious offenders remaining within the community, there may be a dramatic rise in the prison population as law-abiding citizens clamour to escape the 'free' community for the relative safety of the prison!

Global super-rich are buying up Britain

by Steve Johnson

OUR COUNTRY is being taken over by rich foreigners manipulating our tax laws to outbid native Britons for the most sought-after homes and sending their children to our most exclusive schools.

Ten years ago most of the 180,000 richest householders with an income over £100,000 a year in Britain, were British. Now well over half of this 'group A1' as the marketing men call them are foreign citizens with Arabs alone accounting for 12,000 households.

These are the findings just published by Experian, the credit checking and business services company, after it analysed the results of the latest Census, conducted in 2001.

Philip Beresford, compiler of the annual Sunday Times Rich List, agreed with the Experian report:

"The Rich List is becoming more and more dominated by foreign-born multi-millionaires.

"London is now the centre of the universe for many of the global super-rich. They can do deals here, feel safe, commute easily to New York and London and pay less tax than in most countries".

They can buy up the most historic houses in our cities, or like Russian businessman and new Chelsea proprietor Roman Abramovich, our top football clubs. More worryingly, they can even influence our Government, like Indian steel tycoon and noted New Labour donor Lakshmi Mittal.

Unlike Tony Blair and his Labour Government, the British National Party will not be influenced by foreign money or foreign individuals. The only people who will dictate our policies are those loyal and hard-working Britons who are the bedrock of the BNP.

The Lies Exposed!

False start for media's anti-BNP smear campaign

MEET THE LIARS: (Left) 'Journalist' Jack Jameson, who made up the story to smear Nick Griffin and the British National Party. (Centre) The offending article "Weimar in Wales", and Peter Wilby, the editor of the New Statesman who claimed he was "protecting the landlord of the pub" by not giving any details.

THE MEDIA's campaign against the British National Party in the run-up to the European Elections got off to a somewhat terrible start when a report in the New Statesman magazine was exposed as a pack of lies.

'Journalist' Jack Jameson, claimed to have visited Nick Griffin's local pub in the town and found German marching songs being played and BNP supporters with swastika tattoos, giving Nazi salutes to the strains of Deutschland Über Alles.

The New Statesman story was immediately picked up by the BBC and soon was appearing on press outlets all over the country.

The only purpose of the report was to blacken the name of the BNP and to put voters off supporting the party in June, but the Welshpool Publicans' Association was also upset by the story and called in Dyfed-Powys Police to investigate.

Peter Wilby, the editor of the weekly current affairs publication, even claimed the magazine didn't name the pub because it didn't want to make things difficult for its landlord.

But further police investigations found the whole story to be a pack of lies and the 'journalist' and his editor were forced to come clean and admit that the whole report was made up for the sole purpose of smearing the BNP.

BNP chairman Nick Griffin told Freedom that he didn't have a favourite pub: "I'm just too busy at the moment, but I sometimes enjoy a Sunday pub lunch in Welshpool with my wife Jackie, and our children."

The New Statesman has done a great service to the British National Party.

In the past when lies have been told about the BNP in the press we have have had to wait for a retraction to appear. When it happens, it is usually months later when the story has gone cold and is a tiny apology buried away in the inside pages.

The New Statesman smear story was exposed immediately and the fact it was a pack of lies received wide coverage, even more than the initial story.

There is a concerted media campaign of disinformation against the British National Party. If anyone ever doubted this before, the New Statesman has now provided the concrete evidence.

NICK AT HOME IN WALES: "Time permitting, I sometimes enjoy a Sunday pub lunch in Welshpool with my wife Jackie, and our children.

Money offered to denounce BNP

MEMBERS of an anti-BNP group visited the family of a victim of asylum seeker crime and offered them money to make a statement condemning the British National Party.

This callous and mercenary exploitation of a grieving family only came to light when the lady concerned emailed Freedom with the details of a visit she had received:

"A couple called early evening. They said were from an association looking after victims of crime. They started talking about the accident and the possibility of compensation.

'Financial help'

But suddenly they changed tack and said that the British National Party must not be allowed to capitalise on our tragedy. They said that members of their association would 'like to help us financially' if my husband and I would denounce the BNP and support a campaign by other victims by going to the press and attending meetings.

"They said that *'s tragedy must not be allowed to help the BNP spread its 'poison' and that we had a key role to play in this for which we would receive 'supportive' compensation.

"We said we didn't want to be involved and they quickly left."

Since the email was received, Freedom has been told of two other incidents where people in the public eye through either tragedy or just local politics, have been offered money to make statements condemning the BNP.

PLEASE SUPPORT OUR EURO ELECTIONS FUND

IT IS vital that we raise at least £200,000 in order to stand as many candidates as possible in this year's European Elections. So we need all the help you can give for what could be the most important election campaign that the party has yet contested.

The British National Party intends to stand in every Scottish and English seat and also in Wales.

We have a very good chance of winning seats, success that will change the whole political spectrum of politics in this country. It will allow us access to funding the party can use to grow even faster and closer to a Westminster landslide.

Also the best way to prevent further integration into a non-democratic European Superstate, is to stop it from the inside.

WHERE WE STAND

CRIME: A crack-down on crime with more 'Bobbies on the Beat'. Tougher treatment of criminals, including the return of the death penalty for child killers and terrorists. Zero tolerance for drug-dealers and violent thugs.

IMMIGRATION: An end to immigration and the scandal of bogus asylum seekers flooding Britain. Use the billions now wasted in foreign aid to fund generous 'Homeward Bound' schemes to encourage immigrants to return to their land of ethnic origin.

INDUSTRY: British ownership and control of British industry and resources, including the mass media. Protection of British jobs and industry by selective exclusion of foreign manufactured goods from the British market.

HEALTH: We will use the vast sums of money now wasted on funding our membership of the EU for the restoration of an effective national health service and proactive measures to produce a healthier population in the first place.

EUROPEAN UNION: British withdrawal from the European Union. We will trade with Europe where it benefits Britain, but want no political ties or monetary union.

EDUCATION: A return to traditional methods of education, with stronger discipline in the classroom and an end to 'trendy' teaching methods which have failed our children so badly.

ENVIRONMENT: A healthy environment for a healthy people - the protection of our countryside; a ban on greenfield-site house building except in exceptional cases of genuine local need and an end to field trials of genetically modified crops.

FARMING & FISHING: The regeneration of British farming, with the objective of achieving the maximum self-sufficiency in food. The restoration of the fishing industry through protection of our traditional fishing grounds.

GOVERNMENT & COMMUNITY: The establishment of a government that puts British interests first. A return to healthy moral values and policies aimed at strengthening the family and community. Tough penalties for corruption in public life.

FREEDOM: A massive expansion of freedom and democracy to roll back the erosion of our traditional freedoms and truly reflect the wishes of the people. The adoption of popular referenda and high technology direct democracy.

DEFENCE: An alternative defence strategy based on the principle of armed neutrality. No British blood should be shed in conflicts which do not involve British interests. The restoration of the County Regiment system and the reversal of defence cuts which have weakened our Armed Forces and cost thousands of jobs.

REMEMBER! It doesn't matter if you don't agree with us on every last thing. Like all other democratic political parties, the BNP includes some members who disagree with one or two policies. Just ask yourself whether you agree with more of our policies than those of the other parties. Most people do, which is why we are the fastest growing political party in Britain today.

Migrant workers take British jobs

SCOTTISH workers in East Lothian are facing financial ruin as asylum seekers, bussed in from Glasgow's Sighthill area, undercut local wage levels.

Ten workers at the Monaghan Middlebrook Mushroom firm were laid off in December and the remaining workforce has been warned they will be sacked if picking rates are not improved. The illegal immigrant workers, mainly from Eastern European countries, are willing to work for a flat rate of £4.50 an hour, although the standard rate is nearly £6.00 an hour.

CHEAP LABOUR: Migrant workers are replacing British mushroom pickers.

The company insists that its foreign workers are working under a Home Office scheme, and that their high numbers reflect the fact that they are more productive than local workers.

But Scots workers accuse managers of manipulating the work process so that migrant workers appeared to work harder. "The company knows which sheds provide the best yield so they put the immigrants in there, then claim they are better workers. None of us are racist but we fear that these migrant workers are going to cost us our jobs."

Taxman launders illegal immigrant building workers

Labour's policy on immigration and asylum is a farce

by Steve Johnson

ONE HUNDRED thousand illegal immigrants are now working in the British building trade alone. Helped to work here illegally courtesy of the British taxman.

That was the shock result of a survey of 300 building sites across the UK carried out by the building trade's standards body, the Considerate Constructors' Scheme.

The survey found that one-in-ten of those working on British construction sites were immigrants, mostly from Eastern Europe. Almost all were working illegally, but most of their employers didn't know that. This is because they had official documents proving they were registered UK taxpayers!

The average building employer understandably assumes that anyone who could produce an official Inland Revenue Construction Industry Scheme 4 (or CIS4) card, proving he is a UK taxpayer, must be working legally.

But in fact the Inland Revenue just give a temporary CIS4 card to anyone who asks for one, without checking whether they are legally entitled to be here. Last year alone they handed out 40,000 of these cards to all and sundry.

In theory only a permanent CIS4 card proves the bearer is here legally, but the only difference is that such cards carry a permanent National Insurance number. This subtle distinction is lost on the majority of the building trade subcontractors who take on most of these illegals.

As Gerry Lean, Director of Industrial Relations at the Construction Confederation, which represents Britain's biggest building firms, said, "Having spoken to a number of sub-contractors they, perhaps quite wrongly, aren't aware of the distinction".

In any case, why should they care whether they are hiring illegal immigrants? The penalties if they are caught are no more than a slap on the wrist. As Mr Lean observed; "there was a recently reported case of someone employing 12 people illegally and there was a £100 fine – that's only £8.50 a person!

Although there are theoretically punitive sanctions they are not currently being imposed."

The Government's immigration and asylum policy is a farce! While Home Secretary, David Blunkett, blethers on about controlling illegal immigration through work permits, another department of his own Government is helping illegal immigrants steal our jobs by providing them with the necessary documentation.

Not if you're British

A NEW scheme has been launched in South Kensington, London, to enable local youngsters to achieve their full potential.

In addition to practical workshops, visits to museums and art galleries, supplementary and summer schooling will form part of this new 'personalised learning' venture.

Launching the scheme, Schools Minister, Steven Twigg, enthused: "It will ensure that every child will have the opportunity to achieve their potential."

But apparently it's not every child - unless there are no white, English-speaking, British youngsters left in South Kensington.

The scheme is only open to refugees and asylum seekers, speakers of English as an additional language, and under-achieving ethnic minorities.

We're here to stay!

NEWCASTLE CITY Council were delighted with its recent conference at the Castlegate Centre, to offer advice on housing, welfare benefits and education to asylum seekers and refugees.

Local Labour councillors said they welcomed the event as an opportunity "to learn from different communities and share cultures."

Tyneside voters certainly learnt a lot about their new neighbours from the title of the conference - 'We're Here to Stay!'

EU apple won't keep the doctor away

EUROPEAN UNION-funded agri-business is literally destroying the natural goodness of the very food we eat by cramming teeth-rotting sugars into our fruit and sucking essential nutrients and vitamins out of our vegetables.

The shocking extent of the results of the Brussels-subsidised industrialisation of our agriculture was revealed in two scientific studies published in February.

Mineralogist, David Thomas, found that levels of essential minerals such as iron, magnesium, potassium and copper had fallen in 64 kinds of British fruit and vegetables between those in the first official records in 1940 and today.

The same decline in goodness and food value was discovered by nutrition researcher, Anne-Marie Mayer, of the top US Cornell University in her study published in the British Food Journal.

Both researchers pin the blame for the massive decline in goodness in our fruit and veg squarely on the industrial farming techniques demanded by the European Union's Common Agricultural Policy.

Even more worrying is that our food isn't just having the goodness taken out of it but is having tooth-rotting sugars packed in. The latest official US Government study found that levels of sugars in supermarket apples, pears, pineapples and bananas have increased over the last 30 years by over 50%. The same is true here.

No wonder the British Dental Association has recently reversed its long-standing advice on eating apples. Eating a traditional British apple, dentists always reckoned, was good for your teeth – as good as a thorough cleaning. Eating a modern Euro-apple, on the other hand, the BDA now reckons is actually harmful to your teeth!

So Brussels and its corrupt farm policies aren't just picking our pockets. They're ruining our food and wrecking our health, and that of our children.

TOOTH DECAY: Levels of sugars in supermarket fruit are on the rise.

It's time to dump these rotten apples and bring back healthy British food grown in traditional ways by British farmers. So an apple a day will again keep the doctor away!

Join the Trafalgar Club

TRAFALGAR CLUB members make a real difference to the British National Party.

They pledge a minimum of £15 a month, in return for which they are entered into a prize draw every month, receive occasional special internal bulletins, and are entitled to attend the annual club dinner free of charge.

In addition every fully paid up first year member receives a TRAFALGAR CLUB tie (or personalised organiser file for ladies). The tie carries the first two 'words' of Nelson's semaphore signal before the Battle of Trafalgar - "England Expects". Second year members receive a fine enamel badge and third year members a specially-designed umbrella.

Nick Griffin on tour in the South West

Four days and £10,000 later!

by Clive Wakley

BNP CHAIRMAN Nick Griffin completed an exhausting, but highly successful, four day tour of the South West at the beginning of February that resulted in over £11,000 being raised in donations and pledges for the South-West's European Elections campaign.

Day 1: Saturday

Nick was the key-note speaker and guest of honour at the February meeting of the Bristol and Western Counties (BAWC) sub-region at which an impressive £5,025 was collected or pledged.

During the evening the BNP chairman met up with various regional officials to discuss a number of strategic issues relating to party development and electoral activity for the region.

Day 2: Sunday

The day started with Nick being interviewed by BBC Bristol for that day's Politics Show - the interview being televised some two hours later. This in turn prompted one Bristol area member to pledge a further £1,000 to the Party resulting in £7,000 being raised from the Bristol area in under 24 hours!

BNP South West is weaning rural Britain away from the stale sleazy irrelevance of Conservatism

Later that day the Chairman crossed into Devon where he addressed a meeting of the Party's Plymouth Branch. The seventy members and supporters in attendance showed their appreciation of his visit by giving, or pledging, some £3,500 to the SW European Election fund.

The day concluded with Nick meeting up with party organisers from Devon and Cornwall to discuss a number of strategic initiatives.

Day 3: Monday.

The Chairman joined a team of Exeter activists and spent much of the day leafleting in both Exeter and nearby Exminster. That evening, following a planning meeting, Nick met with other Devon activists who were leafleting rural communities outside of Newton Abbot.

Day 4: Tuesday.

Now it was on to Dorset where Nick joined a team of Dorset activists in Bridport. He then spent the remainder of the morning assisting them in the leafleting of this ancient West Dorset sea port. During the afternoon he continued his journey eastward to Christchurch where he joined local activists busy leafleting there.

During the evening he addressed a highly enjoyable meeting of Bournemouth BNP which was attended by just under thirty Bournemouth members and supporters. The collection raised well over £650 in donations and pledges.

The SW region was delighted with Nick Griffin's visit and he was, in turn, equally pleased with the level of organisation and development of the Party in the South-West and, in particular, the quality and quantity of the members we are attracting to our cause.

The South West BNP is no longer the 'quiet backwater' that it once was. It is now leading the way in weaning rural Britain away from the stale sleazy irrelevance of Conservatism to vibrant British Nationalism and traditionalism.

A great capacity to see the truth

BRITISH NATIONAL PARTY candidates, members and supporters must prepare themselves for an hysterical onslaught from the media and our opponents over the next three months. Expect mud-slinging and dirty tricks to blacken the name of the BNP, as a broadside of vilification is fired on our party in an effort to blow our European Election campaign out of the water.

Labour and the Tories, aided and abetted by their friends in the media, will sink to any depths to oppose the growing nationalist sentiment in Britain and keep their grip on the reins of power.

It might be relevant to recall two personal episodes, both from twenty years ago, that reveal the nature of the dirty tricks played by those who seek to stifle the growth of British nationalism.

Former Labour MEP, and now Labour peer, Lord John Tomlinson, published a book in 1981 called 'Left, Right the March of Political Extremism in Britain'. In it he claimed that I had served a prison sentence for attacking a Jewish cafe owner.

The accusation was utter nonsense and I sued Tomlinson and his publishers. I won substantial damages in an out-of-court settlement, agreed just minutes before the hearing was due to begin at the Royal Courts of Justice.

But for nearly a year I was discredited by Tomlinson's revelations and the publicity it received. It caused me major problems at my place of work and put me in severe financial difficulties as I had to borrow money to ensure the case proceeded to court.

The following year in May 1983, I was one of three candidates in a local council election in Brighton and our election address warned voters of the dangers we faced unless immigration was stopped.

In January 1984, I became the editor of the main newspaper supporting British nationalism at the time. Then in June 1984 I was visited by the police and told that I was to be prosecuted, under the Race Relations Act, for the election address that was put out 13 months earlier. The two other candidates on the same election address were not to be prosecuted.

The embarrassed policeman heading the case told me that orders for just me to be prosecuted had come from 'the highest level' and that there had been no complaint from anyone in the ward who had received the leaflet.

The whole episode was a political attack by the Conservative Government on the growing nationalist sentiment at the time in the wake of the Broadwater Farm riots. At Lewes Crown Court, I was fined £1,500, but on a matter of principle I refused to pay.

I chose to spend three months in Pentonville Prison, including Christmas 1985, in an effort to draw attention to how the Thatcher Government was stifling any debate on immigration.

Today, that debate is still being stifled, with anyone questioning Labour's immigration and asylum policy being branded a 'racist'.

The coming months will see more and more manufactured horror stories from our opponents in an effort to turn voters away from the BNP. But I believe that people have a great capacity to be able to see through the lies and uncover the truth. Our country is in danger and only the British National Party can be trusted to look after the interests of the British people.

BNP IN THE WEST COUNTRY: South-West European Election List No.1 candidate for the British National Party, Tony North (2nd left), was out campaigning with supporters in Penzance at the beginning of February. The day's activity gained widespread coverage for the BNP as well as a host of new members and supporters.

Everyone benefits from having graduates in society

I think it is a measure of the level of civilisation of a country how well it supports its people. Its disabled people, its elderly people and its under-privileged people.

I also think it is a measure of the level of civilisation of a country how well it supports its academic community.

All of the great civilisations of the past have managed to support an academic community. Yes, someone always has to produce food and do all the mundane things that make a society function but societies benefit from having academics within them.

Therefore, I think university fees should come from normal progressive taxation of the whole population. If people earn more, they pay more tax, so if graduates earn more than non graduates they end up paying more tax and eventually pay for their own education. Everyone benefits from having graduates in society.

I will not be voting for Labour again, although I have in the past, specifically because of its introduction of university tuition fees, regardless of whether or not it also introduces those bodged "top up fees".

Nowhere near 50% of the people in my year from the school I attended would have managed a university degree course which labour claim is the national average.

Where will this tuition fee lunacy end, nurses paying for their training, fighter pilots paying for their training, SAS troops paying for their training etc?

A land fit for heroes?

I have served in the British Army for nearly 24 years. For the last seven years my tours of duty have taken me abroad, to Germany.

I am now posted back in the UK to serve my last six months before retiring in July.

My children were both born in this country in 1982 and 1985 and have British passports. Naturally they have been with me on my postings within the Army for the last 21 years.

My daughter now has a son who is just one year old, but they are not allowed financial support of any kind because they fail the residency test.

Despite it being due to my service to our country that she has been away from the UK, the authorities have ruled that because she has lived outside of the country all her adult life (she was 18 in December), she has no entitlement.

It seems that to get any support in Britain you have to be non-British, not prepared to work and seeking asylum from another country.

Mr D. A. Davies, Newport, Gwent.

Inside knowledge?

I have been amazed at the way the media has been treating the imminent release of the five detainees from Guantanamo Bay.

One would think that they were returning war heroes to listen to the news coverage.

They claim they accidently wandered across the Afghanistan/Pakistan border not knowing there was a war on. Something rather difficult as the country was being pulverized by American bombs.

Finally we have the unedifying spectre of David Blunkett informing us that they will not in the future be a threat to the people of this country.

My question to the Home Secretary is . . . "How do you know this?"

Sally Wood, Aberdeen

Cheap labour welcome

EUROPE Minister Denis MacShane, told the Commons last month that citizens from the new EU will make a "positive contribution" to British life.

He said that plumbers, doctors, teachers, cleaners and agricultural workers from the enlarged countries would be very welcome here.

What he really means is that plumbers, doctors, teachers, cleaners, and agricultural workers who are prepared to work for next to nothing will be welcome here.

The Government is betraying the British working class by allowing the importation of sweat-shop foreign labour into Britain which will put British workers on the dole, and not one MP at Westminster has voiced their concern over this.

No hope of any opposition from the pathetic Tory Party, they even voted in favour of the EU enlargement.

British National Party - you've got my vote in June!

Mike Burgess, Southwark

BNP sets the agenda

I'M A former member of the Conservative Party and an office holder in my local association.

I have been a regular visitor to the BNP website and have been impressed with everything I've read.

Having seen the reactionary political u-turns of both the Prime Minister and the leader of Her Majesty's opposition in recent months, I have come to a crystal clear conclusion:

The British National Party is now setting this country's political agenda!

Jonathan Darke, Brighton

Highly suspect

THE Home Secretary is basing his case for massive immigration on highly suspect figures.

Blunkett claims that immigrants contribute a net £2.5 billion more in tax than they cost in benefits, but immigration think-tank, Migration Watch, challenges this.

It claims that the government's information is unreliable because:

* it omits the fact that some studies have found the overall fiscal effect of immigration to be negative
* in the year chosen, 1999/2000, the budget was in surplus so everybody contributed more than they cost in benefits.
* the cost of the extra infrastructure required for this addition to our population is ignored.
* it fails to address the key measure which is whether immigration adds to GDP per head.

The Government's calculation is clearly unsound, yet it goes on repeating its 'more tax than benefits' claim, in the hope that it will be accepted as a 'fact'.

Massive levels of unrestricted immigration into Britain will destroy the quality of life for us all.

Mr E. Andrews, Bath

Cultural 'status quo'

SIR David Calvert-Smith's quote in the February Freedom saying, "all Britons are racist" is wrong.

The dictionary definition of racism, is 'animosity and discrimination' between any two ethnic groups.

There is little animosity between the indigenous Briton and other ethnic groups. We don't hate them. We do not wish them ill. We just don't particularly want them here. We don't want to have to compromise with our culture, our tongue, our religion, our schools or our way of life.

This is not racism, it's simply expressing our preference for a cultural 'status quo'

Keith Davis, Canterbury.

Fixed penalties are no incentive to get insured

DESPITE a recent rise in the number of deaths and accidents caused by uninsured, unlicensed and unregistered drivers, the Home Office intends to downgrade the seriousness of these motoring offences in an effort to cut prosecution costs and reduce prison numbers.

The fixed-penalty system will be extended to include the offence of 'driving without insurance'. Offenders will no longer have to attend court but will incur a fixed penalty of £200 (£65 for benefit claimants) and six licence penalty points. Repeat offenders will now face a community sentence rather than prison.

RISK: Uninsured drivers are nine times more likely to crash

In addition to negating the deterrent effect of a criminal prosecution, the fixed penalty system will also mean that police officers are far less likely to pick up other offences commonly associated with having no insurance, such as having given false details or using a defective vehicle.

Setting the cost of being caught at far less than the cost of driving legally will offer no disincentive to the estimated one million illegal drivers on UK roads.

Given that these drivers are nine times more likely to crash than other drivers and that they cause 7,000 accidents involving injuries each year, the savings gained on prison and prosecution costs may well be paid for with life and limb.

EU farm policy is wiping out Europe's birdlife

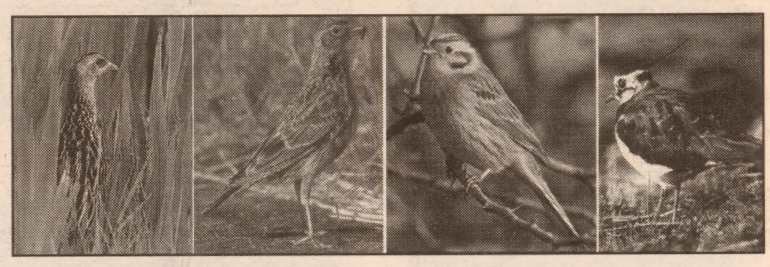
by Steve Johnson

THE European Union's Common Agricultural Policy (CAP) is not just ripping off British taxpayers, it's wiping out British birdlife!

A new report blames industrialised farming, subsidised at our expense by CAP, for reducing the numbers of 24 common European wild bird species by a third since 1980.

The Farmland Bird Indicator study, published jointly by Britain's Royal Society for the Protection of Birds, Bird Life International and the European Bird Census Council, reveals that in Britain alone "between 1970 and 1999 the skylark declined by 52%, the yellowhammer by 53% and the corn bunting by 88%".

In contrast no such decline in bird numbers has occurred in countries like Norway, Switzerland and Eastern Europe which have stayed free from the agricultural dictats of the European Union.



UNDER THREAT: Corncrake, Skylark, Yellowhammer and Lapwing.

Since Britain joined the Common Market in 1973, Brussels farm policies have all but wiped out lapwings and tree sparrows in many areas of England.

If this CAP agribusiness madness carries on unchecked, the effects on our wild birds will be much worse. According to the RSPB, 150 of Europe's 453 native bird species need sustainable farming practices to survive. The very practices Brussels is determined to stamp out in favour of pesticide-soaked prairies of taxpayer-funded oilseed rape.

RSPB Chief Executive Graham Wynne, focussed on one native British bird whose plight epitomised the EU disaster: "The decline of the corncrake has been one of the most obvious effects of the industrialisation of farming across Europe. Subsidies paid to farmers to maximise output have driven it out of much of the EU. This has been so marked you can pick out the outline of the Common Agricultural Policy imprinted on the distribution map of the bird".

Distorting British history to provide its black heritage

by John R. Waugh

THE VAST amount of media exposure over the 100 greatest black Britons poll did at least provide one startling disclosure! England had a 'black' Queen in the 14th century, Queen Philippa, the wife of Edward III.

Nowadays few people believe what the television and newspapers tell them, and further investigation of Queen Philippa shows exactly why there is this contempt for the media.

I traced the genetic heritage of Queen Philippa and found out that her mother, Jeanne De Valois (1295-1352), was of noble Italian/ Sicillian/Hungarian lineage, whilst her father, Guillaume III De Avesnes of Hainault (1280-1337) was of Northern European descent.

Her paternal Grandparents are all of the same Low-countries heritage as her father; the maternal side being a mixture of Italian and Central/ Eastern European stock.

The distinct impression was given that this was a celebration of the 100 greatest black Britons and that the term "black" was meant to refer to those of African or mixed African descent, of which Queen Philippa most certainly wasn't.

HUNDRED YEARS WAR: Queen Philippa begs Edward III to spare five prisoners taken prisoner during the siege of Calais.

Various historical documents (although historians at Oxford University have repeatedly claimed she was in fact, white) comment on the darkness of her skin.

Living in North-West Europe during that period, I would imagine anyone of Mediterranian parentage would indeed appear "darker" than the fair skinned Flemish and French with whom she lived.

Adhering to this absurd rationale, should we now refer to Spaniards, Portugese or Italians as 'black'people?

It was quite wrong to include the Queen Philippa in the list during all the headline sections of the programme and then later to comment upon the slim-to-none chance that she was, indeed black.

The fact that she was voted fourth in the survey is also of concern because it means that people of African decent in the UK are being misled and deluded about their own distinct heritage within this country.

This inclusion of Queen Philippa on the list of Black Britons is nothing more than a distortion of the facts in order to give some kind of moral and historical substance to black people living in the United Kingdom today.

Political correctness down on the allotment

by Philip Peters

THE ever-onward march of political correctness has now reached the allotments - those well known hotbeds of bigotry and intolerance!

By the end of January all allotment holders in the Conservative controlled Borough of Reigate and Banstead will be required to sign a so called 'Dignity Statement' if they want to keep their plots.

The statement says: "Distinctions based on gender, race, nationality, ethnic origin, status, role in the community, religious or political beliefs, disability, age, marital status, family circumstance and sexual orientation will not be tolerated" - well that covers just about everyone doesn't it?

The document then goes on to say that: "Harassment, bullying, intimidation, aggression, rudeness, ridicule, insulting, foul or obscene gestures will not be tolerated under any circumstances, and anyone found breaking the rules will be required to give up their plot".

That people are now required to sign such a document, which simply describes what should be normal civilised behaviour - and would have been not so long ago in Britain - is indicative of just how uncivilised our country has become.

That a Conservative controlled borough should implement such a daft and pointless directive - the sort of thing you would expect of a Labour or Liberal council these days - also demonstrates just how far the Conservatives have degenerated, and how unfit they too have become for Government.

Gypsy stabbed in racist attack

TWO violent racists walked free from High Wycombe Magistrates Court last month in what their victim described as a case of "justice gone mad".

The pair were part of a gang of five youths who launched an vicious, racially-motivated attack on Malcolm Cupis and his dog Gypsy. But they were just bound over to keep the peace despite Government promises of heftier penalties for race hate related crimes.

GYPSY: Nearly bled to death after being stabbed in the throat.

The Crown Prosecution's case was seriously undermined because the police failed to forensically examine the weapon used to slash Gypsy's throat, the crucial recording of Mr Cupis's 999 call had been deleted and one of the youths had absconded police bail and fled to Pakistan.

Mr Cupis, who has since moved away from the area because of safety fears, said, "I have lost faith in the criminal justice system."

Bolton BNP contest Mosque application

WHEN the Bolton Evening News reported that an application had been lodged to build an Islamic centre and mosque on green belt land at Ormston Farm, Church Lane, Westhoughton, Bolton BNP were quick to respond.

A local leaflet was produced giving details of how residents could object to the planning application and these were immediately distributed in the area.

These were very well received by residents and local organiser Ian Hague was interviewed by the Evening News about the leaflets.

"Even if this initial planning application is refused that won't be the end of the matter. The long-running mosque saga in Clitheroe is proof of this. Sometimes people just can't accept 'no' as an answer."

Birkenhead meeting

ON February 2nd the first BNP meeting took place in Birkenhead.

Secretary Arthur Read reports that twenty members and supporters attended the meeting where donations and a collection raised in the region of £150.

The evening's guest speakers were NW Regional organiser, Bev Jones and David Joines, the new Wirral BNP organiser.

15% is a solid first effort in rural Suffolk

AT the beginning of the Yoxford by-election campaign BNP candidate Paul Goodchild told the Ipswich Evening Star that he was standing in the election to 'test the water' as to the support for the party in the area and to put down a marker for the BNP in the run up to the European Elections in June.

Five weeks on and the British National Party has certainly made its mark. A stunning vote of 15% on a huge turnout of 60% has brought the BNP right to the centre of local politics in rural Suffolk.

The unprecedented media campaign against Paul Goodchild, orchestrated by a group of New Labour-supporting celebrities, made sure that not just this tiny corner of Suffolk but the whole of Eastern England became aware that the BNP was contesting the election.

Paul was very satisfied with the result:

"This is a great foundation stone for the party to build on. Next time the campaign by the New Labour celebrities will be old news and shouldn't get the same coverage. The Lib-Dems won't have the manpower next time because they will be fighting other elections as well.

"We have well and truly sunk political roots in the ward and I think in a straight forward campaign without the media hype and outside interference, I must be in with a chance of winning."

Matt Single, the Number One on the BNP Eastern Euro Constituency List, was naturally delighted by the surprisingly high BNP vote.

PAUL GOODCHILD: he was very satisfied with his first effort in Yoxford ward and believes he could win the seat in a free and fair election.

"It's beyond all expectations. If the BNP can average 15% in this part of the Euro constituency together with our more significant votes in Essex, we must be in with a chance of getting an MEP elected in June. Well done to Paul for such an excellent effort.

BNP chairman, Nick Griffin, was equally upbeat:

"This was a very good election for us. It's a huge year for the British National Party and we were extremely keen to raise the profile of the party at the earliest opportunity. I have sent my congratulations to Paul Goodchild on fighting a thoroughly professional and very effective campaign."

"But we also have to thank that group of celebrities. Without their timely intervention, our efforts would have only warranted a few lines in the local newspapers. Thanks to them, the party received national coverage leading to a surge in our website traffic and telephone inquiries.

"Our last two by-elections, in North Wales and East Anglia, were amongst the sternest election tests we could face and we came through with flying colours and a 15% vote in both."

Superb South West turnout greets BNP Chairman

THE LAST couple of weeks have seen intense activity by BNP members in Devon & Cornwall. Party Chairman Nick Griffin attended a meeting in the Plymouth area and witnessed a superb turnout.

His inspiring speech generated a very healthy collection for the Euro campaign. New members joined on the spot and several "old faces" were welcomed back to the now booming BNP cause.

Campaigning teams have been active from Penzance and Newlyn to Exeter and many points in between. Media interest is high with regular articles and letters appearing. Our fund-holder, farmer Peter Chantler, was featured on a BBC Radio Devon talk show. His intelligent and informed contribution was acknowledged when the presenter thanked him and said "please call again".

The tired old smear campaigns are now reappearing, of course, but they are easily dismissed by the smiling faces of ordinary British people saying we've had enough of political correctness and enforced multiculturalism. Typical is one BNP member in Exeter who went out leafleting with his wife pushing their new born baby in a pram by his side.

BNP cleans off racist graffiti!

WHEN vandals daubed racist graffiti on a local church St Johns in Pemberton, near Wigan the BNP stepped in to remove the offending slogans.

Local BNP member Dennis Shambley contacted the vicar who was only to pleased for the help and the graffiti was removed.

DENNIS SHAMBLEY He helped out his local church after an attack by racist yobs.

Not only was the church daubed with racist graffiti and anti-Christian slogans, but grave stones in the churchyard where also damaged by these hate-filled yobs.

Burnley councillor speaks at Huddersfield meeting

THE SECOND BNP meeting in Huddersfield took place on the 2nd of February and was a great success with an attendance of over 60 and many new faces.

The guest speaker was Burnley councillor Patricia Thomson, who gave a fascinating insight into her experiences as a councillor on Burnley Council.

She revealed how childishly some councillors from other parties seemed to behave whilst they were supposed to be discussing serious issues.

Patricia went on to emphasise the importance of retaining our Britishness and how so-called political correctness was undermining common sense.

The Burnley councillor commended the professional set-up of the BNP in Kirklees. Other speakers included Nick Cass, our number one Euro election candidate for the Yorkshire region, and BNP councillor David Exley, from Kirklees council.

The meeting was administered by the newly restructured Kirklees branch which has seen Huddersfield, Dewsbury, Batley and Mirfield merge into one large British National Party branch.

Prospective BNP get familiar!

ON MONDAY February 2nd the British National Party group on Calderdale Metropolitan Borough Council held its second group caucus at Halifax Town Hall.
This took place in the council chamber to help familiarise prospective candidates for the June local elections with what might be their future surroundings.
The full agenda included the local elections, the European elections and the regional assembly proposals.

5,500 leaflets in just 4 hours

LONDON LEAFLETERS: BNP Mayoral candidate, Julian Leppert (centre foreground) leads the leaflet team that grows in recruits by the day.

THE whole of Eltham in south east London was covered in a leafleting session at the beginning of February. In just four hours, a staggering five thousand five hundred leaflets were distributed.
The leaflets reminded residents that race attacks and crimes also affect white people and at least one person on every street that we covered came out in support of our campaign.
After a short break, twenty activists strolled down Eltham High Street giving out leaflets and speaking with the public who were very supportive.
Each time the London team meets up, more and more members flock to the banner to leaflet areas of London that have not been covered before or at least for many years.

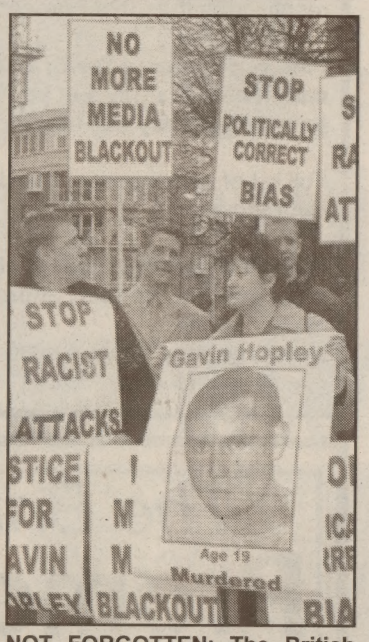
BNP demo shames the CRE and NUJ

MONDAY 16th February saw two demonstrations take place in Central London to campaign for justice for the family of 19-year-old Gavin Hopley who was murdered 12 months ago in Oldham.

The first demonstration was held outside the headquarters of the Commission For Racial Equality (CRE). This government-funded organisation seems only interested in highlighting the causes of ethnic minorities and has never campaigned for white victims of discrimination and racist violence. Specially produced leaflets were handed out to passing pedestrians and appreciative motorists, who were eager to know more about Gavin's case and our campaign to highlight white victims of race attacks.

In the afternoon there was a second vigil, this time in King's Cross outside the head office of the National Union of Journalists. This venue was chosen because the NUJ has tried to impose a blackout on Gavin's racist murder.

A minute's silence was held in the memory of Gavin Hopley after which there were speeches from Tony Wentworth, head of the Young BNP and Richard Barnbrook, British National Party London Co-ordinator.



NOT FORGOTTEN: The British National Party draws public attention to discrimination faced by white victims of ethnic crime.

RECRUITMENT: IT'S WEST YORKSHIRE THAT LEADS THE WAY IN 2005

"Labour's so out of touch" says BNP member number 14,000

by Chris Green
BNP Administration Officer

LEADING the way for British National Party recruitment over the first two months of 2004 is the West Yorkshire region. Apart from the brand new members, previous old hands are returning to the fold with one rejoining after an absence of ten years!

It is the tireless efforts put in by our councillors, organisers and activists which is providing such a high recruitment dividend in Yorkshire. Further south in our capital city and suburbs, blanket leafleting by a determined team lead by London Development Officer, Richard Barnbrook, has produced some excellent results.

In Swanley in Kent ten new members were signed up in just one afternoon. This is a BNP record, achieved using the tried and tested method of mass leafleting followed-up by a personal visit to everyone who responded.

This should always be the formula. Just writing or telephoning inquiries does not produce the same recruitment rate as personal visits. To prove the point, a further 4 new members were recruited from Swanley just a few days later from another round of face-to-face meetings.

As an interesting, and often surprising, recruitment map starts to form in the early months of the New Year, it clearly illustrates the areas that are working and those who are still fast asleep from the festive season.

One lady who has woken up is BNP membership cardholder number 14000. Previously a member of the Labour Party, this lady from Wigan in Lancashire, explained her reasons for joining the BNP in her application letter:

"I wish to join the British National Party because I agree with your policies.

"Until twelve months ago, I was a member of the Labour Party but I have become extremely disillusioned with their views on health, education and, most of all, the asylum problem.

"I felt like I was banging my head against a brick wall and whenever I disagreed with them on asylum I was called a racist.

"All I want is a fair deal for our own people. The old saying, charity begins at home, doesn't come into Labour's thinking."

As is now a British National Party tradition, every thousandth new member receives free membership and subscriptions to both our Voice of Freedom newspaper and Identity magazine.
